				Rescue Service in Alytus
Short description	The strategic objective of the project is to strengthen the cooperation between the state fire and rescue services of the border area in order to support and increase capabilities and efforts required to deal with accidents and elimination of its consequences. At the same time partners seek to improve management of accidents and coordination in order to ensure security of the population, environment and property in the borderline area. The need of such a project is justified by the current lack of provisions for joint cross-border rescue actions which limits the quality and efficiency of rescue works in case of chemical-ecological and water rescue accidents. The main problem is the general deficit of knowledge and equipment of rescue forces in organizing and carrying out specific rescue and decontamination works. One of the solutions is to equip rescue services of the border region with special rescue equipment and to organize trainings for increasing competence.
